William E. Carpenter, of the local Adventist Church reports that the following members: Mr. Frank Flinn, Mrs. Anna Word, Mrs. G. I. Watt, Mr. and Mrs. Roland Nordstrom accompanied him to join delegates from other cities for this special three-hour program.

Main speakers for the workshop were two leading church officials, whose speeches were on the subject of Religious Liberty. They were Marvin E. Loewin, Secretary of the Religious Liberty Department of Washington, D. C., Gen Conference of Adventist and John Morgan, Secretary of the Religious Liberty Department of the Potomac Conference of Conference headquarters in Staunton.

The local workshop was one of a series of similar sessions held in the state last week. The workshop was underway at 7 o'clock, with a briefing session for ministers, lay members, and local elders.

At 7 o'clock a public meeting began for members of all Adventist churches of this area. This meeting included a motion picture, a discussion of Religious Liberty problems, a question and answer period, and presentations by visiting speakers. Topics for the workshop program were separation of church and state, Federal aid to parochial schools, Sunday "Blue Laws", calendar reform, threats of censorship, religious test for public office, and religion in public schools.
